“ I love you so much Granny. My poor little Granny.... only a few understand that meaning. I tried to prepare my mind for this day, but there's no way to prepare your heart. It still seems unreal, like it was all a bad dream. I remember it was just Friday evening you put your hand on my face and said, "I love you too Daniellie". I said, "I'll see ya on Sunday!" If I would have know that would be our last chat, our last visit, our last hug and I love you, I would have held on a little tighter and longer. I would have stayed that extra hour or two. I would have told you I loved you a few more times. But I know you already knew that. You can never be replaced or compared to. Your soul was truly one of a kind. You will never be forgotten, or far from my heart or mind. I know one day we'll meet again, but until then I have our memories. Some of the best memories of my childhood, teenage years, adulthood, motherhood, all of it. I'll remember your laugh, your advice, your sense of humor, your smell and most definitely your hugs. I love you unconditionally and always will.
