Cathy, or C.W. as many called her, spent her childhood raising raccoons in secret under her bed, throwing popcorn down at her siblings from the balcony during movies, and reveling in being the 'odd one out.'

In high school Cathy played clarinet under the tutelage of her favorite teacher, Mr. Watkins. As a dedicated fan of Motown, their marching band performances fueled her love of music. Cathy grew her career as a vocalist, cutting a demo tape with support from her best friend, roommate, and biggest fan -Janine. The first in her family to move out of state, Cathy traveled to San Diego, California and began managing a jazz club. The work she did introduced her to countless friends, musicians, and artistic influences from all over the world. It was in this whirlwind of the entertainment industry that she met her now ex-husband Robert "Rob" Reynolds. They married in 1991 and Catherine went on to give birth to her daughter, Acadia Reynolds. In both California and Montana Cathy developed a local following as an artist and caterer. In her later years Cathy returned to the south, and shared her artistic skills in the form of storytelling, costuming, and dramatic play with her nieces and nephews.
