I had a dream last night that I was on my knees begging and pleading with God, in my dream I was pleading with the Lord to go back and make this not true, to please bring you back and I was like a small child negotiating saying "no, no we can fix this, we can change this, please God make it better, this isn't real. you are still on your bunk in my eyes and i heard God say softly, it doesn't work like that, you can only go forward. I woke up this morning with you on my heart. I love you, I Will live my life remembering and cherishing everything you have done to bless me and I will be forever Grateful. you changed my life for the better AND I know where you are, with mom. xoxox

I remember you from last period of the day in a math class in a trailer in ESJH. You made me laugh with your sense of humor. You were the smartest student in that class. When the bell would ring to dismiss you always had something to say to tell me good bye. You were polite towards me and I will always remember that.

“ The thought of having to write about you like this just breaks my heart. As my friend, you were an absolute pleasure to know. I always appreciated your way of explaining things to me lol and the love you had for your girls. I think about all the special memories your daughters will keep and I also think of all the things you won't be here for. At only 38 you had so much more to do, so much more to see and so many loved ones to one day meet. My favorite memory of Kenny isn't one specific thing but rather his sweet ,funny, loving, generous, hard headed, strong minded, street smart ,handsome personality I call my friend. I'm sorry it went this way for you. The whole click will truly miss you.
